AIRON MALLARS

Airon Mallars is a 27-years-old Oregon native who relocated to Los Angeles three years ago to pursue music. But once out there, he ended up becoming a full-time model and pursuing fitness instead. Mallars is now a personal trainer who teaches calisthenics. "I want to teach my clients that they can get in shape by using only body weight and not spending hours in the gym. My workouts usually range from 30-60 minutes and are high intensity with lots of reps and very light weights, if any weights at all. Calisthenic workouts completely change the game," he said. You can book an appointment with Mallars through his website. aironmallars.com / @airon_mallars

MARC PAPINEAU

// Gord Weber

He's a lover, a fighter, an entrepreneur, and a believer; rounding out the Top 8 is Marc Papineau. This passionate, ambitious athlete wants to shout from the rooftop that he loves his wife, kids, and family with everything he has. He firmly believes you can do anything you put your mind to, but when you do, you can be humble, kind, loyal, and above all, true to yourself. "I'd like to share gratitude and love for the people in my life who support me in my pursuit of greatness, especially in fitness."
